Equipment Tip # 12
JERSEYS & SOCKS

Fitting

A hockey jersey should be large enough to fit over the upper body equipment and provide the player with a good range of motion.

The length of the sweater should be sufficient to allow it to go over the pants and not ride up when the player is skating. The arms of the sweater should extend to the wrists. Ensure the sweater is not too baggy to avoid it getting caught on bench doors and other objects.

Ensure the neckline of the sweater does not compress the back of the neck. This may result in chafing and/or injury.

Socks hold the shin pads in position. They should extend from the top of the foot to the top of the leg.

Socks are tucked inside the back of the skates and inside the hockey pants. They are held up with either a hockey garter belt system or velcro fasteners attached to the jock/jill strap. Socks should not be held up with tape or straps above the knee area. This can cause loss of circulation and discomfort.

Maintenance

Jerseys and socks should be washed after each ice session in cool water, to avoid shrinking, and air dried.

Helpful Hints

To air dry equipment, you may wish to consider using a clothes rack which can be stored and set-up easily. Never use a direct heat source to dry equipment. This could lead to a breakdown of the fibres and the padding.
